3 More Go on Trial in Prague
For 'Subverting the Republic'

By James Feron

PRAGUE, July 31 (AP).—Milan Huebl, former head of the Czechoslovak Communist party's political college, went on trial today with two other defendants for "subverting the republic" by distributing anti-government pamphlets.

About 25 former supporters of Alexander Dubcek, the Communist leader ousted in 1969 for his radical reforms, cheered the defendants in the corridor as they were led into the trial chamber in Prague City Court.

A few minutes earlier the group had scuffled briefly with policemen, who forced them down the long passageway and away from the courtroom entrance. The trials are open, but the spectators are carefully screened.

The would-be spectators, some of them former high officials of the Dubcek regime, argued that the trial was being conducted in virtual secrecy and that barring them violated their constitutional rights.

"Don't discuss rights with me," a policeman said.

"That's what you'd like in this country," one of the men in the group shouted back, "that nothing could be discussed."

Seven Trials

It was the sharpest expression of dissent since the seven trials began a few weeks ago in Prague and Brno. So far in the trials, which are expected to continue for two more weeks, 23 persons have been sentenced to prison terms of up to six years for subversion and incitement, mostly in connection with pamphleteering last year.

Mr. Huebl's co-defendants are Karel Kyncl, a former radio commentator who broadcast from the United States in the pre-Dubcek period, and Karel Bartosek, a historian who helped prepare the program for the clandestine 14th party congress that condemned the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in August, 1968.

It was the entry of the Warsaw Pact forces in response to an alleged appeal for help against a threatened "counterrevolution" that eventually led to Mr. Dubcek's downfall and relegation to obscurity; he was replaced in 1969 by Gustav Husak.

Seeking 'Normalization'

Mr. Husak, in seeking "normalization," has insisted that there would be no political trials but that those who continued to work actively against his leadership, as the 28 are said to have done, would be punished.

The defendants are being charged under the Penal Code's Paragraph 98, dealing with subversion. Sources outside the courtroom said that Mr. Huebl, who is the highest party official to stand trial so far, might be charged under sections of the Penal Code calling for prison terms up to 10 years.

He had previously been named in indictments charging earlier defendants with having edited, with others, the "Chronicle of Current Events," a short-lived underground publication that contained articles, reprinted from Western publications, dealing with Czechoslovakia.

Election Pamphlets
The pamphlets, on the other hand, were distributed before last November's general election. They urged voters to cross off names or abstain from voting. An estimated 72,000 pamphlets were said to have been circulated at the time.

Among those who attempted to witness the trial were Pavel Kohout, a prominent author, poet and playwright whose works have been published in the West, and Lubos Kohout, a former professor at the University of Prague. The names of the two men, who are not related, were recorded by the police, apparently for having been the most outspoken.

Reuters reported police later arrested Lubos Kohout. It noted that he had previously lost his posts as a lecturer in history at the university and as a member of the Presidium of the Communist Party of Prague City Committee and now has a manual job at a print shop.

Plainclothes police arrested him as he left a restaurant and took him away in a car, Reuters said. It said Pavel Kohout had not been arrested up till this afternoon.

Also present was Bohumil Simon, former secretary of the Prague City Committee and a close associate of Mr. Dubcek, and T. U. Sekanina, a former deputy foreign minister and deputy chairman of the Czechoslovak Union of Women.

Jan Sling jr., son of a Communist party official who was executed in the 1950s with 12 others in a famous political trial, also was present, along with the wives of men who have already been sentenced or who are awaiting trial. There have been no acquittals.

Group Outside
The group in the corridor also included former journalists, a leading nuclear theoretician, students, some Western newsmen and a scattering of men assumed to be secret police.

Many in the group were Communists, and a few had spent some time in custody during the police roundups of last fall and spring when 300 to 400 suspects were questioned about the pamphleteering.

Ceteka, the government press agency, later announced the opening of the trial in a brief item titled "Subversion." It read: "The trial began today of Milan Huebl and company. The prosecutor charges them with the crime of subverting the republic according to Paragraph 98 of the Penal Code because from the spring of 1971 to the beginning of 1972, in an attempt to contribute to the weakening of the Socialist state system, they prepared illegal pamphlets which they disseminated in Czechoslovakia and also sent abroad."

AT EASE—After an all-night operation in a Catholic area of Belfast yesterday, tired British soldiers catch a few moments of sleep on cold concrete steps in a Belfast park waiting for beds to be set up.

Army Smashes Barricades
In Belfast and Londonderry

In Belfast, Londonderry and other communities "avoided an open confrontation with the massive British military forces that occupied the nationalist areas of these towns early today," United Press International reported. "This decision," he said, "was taken to avoid the very heavy civilian casualties that would have occurred if open resistance had been employed. Our struggle will go on in accordance with the principles of guerrilla warfare."

He also denied the Provisional IRA had any connection with the bombings in Claudi.

The three-hour army assault, code-named Operation Motorman, began at 4 a.m. and used the bulk of the 21,000 troops deployed in this British province. What spurred the tactical decision to smash the barricades was "Bloody Friday," the IRA's bombing attack July 21 in downtown Belfast, which left nine dead and 130 injured.

Before "Bloody Friday," Mr. Whitelaw and his associates had held secret talks with the militant IRA.

He disclosed that President Nixon, Premier John Lynch of the Irish Republic and leaders of other countries had been told in advance of the army operation.

"We have made clear to our allies what we are seeking to do and that what we have in mind is to find a political solution and equally to protect all the community," Mr. Whitelaw said.

British officials here, especially in recent weeks, have appeared acutely aware of American public opinion on the Northern Ireland situation and have made strenuous efforts to seal off the flow of money and arms from American supporters of the IRA.

Mr. Whitelaw made it plain that further hostilities by the IRA are expected.

"I don't doubt they will seek to strike back," he said. "I have no illusion about that."

With British troops now firmly in new positions, army officers were working tonight on plans to set up permanent outposts in Londonderry's Bogside and Creggan sections as well as in several Catholic neighborhoods in Belfast.

"We are determined to make sure these areas are not used by the IRA again for their bases," an army spokesman said.

Although the army move was expected to chill, at least for the moment, Mr. Whitelaw's efforts to work closely with the Catholic community, the decision delighted militant Protestants. In recent months the Protestants had condemned Mr. Whitelaw for his "softness" to the IRA.

The Protestants' militant Ulster Defense Association stood silent today as army and police patrols dismantled the IRA barricades in Belfast. In several Protestant streets off the Shankill Road, youths removed the barricades before army engineers in bulldozers arrived.

"Never again must there be any parts of the country in which the security forces do not move freely," said former Prime Minister Brian Faulkner. "Everybody deserves the protection of the forces of law and order."

Among Catholic politicians and moderates there was some uncertainty, as well as pleas that the army should deal with Protestant militants as well as Catholics.

Lynch Asks Calm
DUBLIN, July 31 (Reuters).—Irish Republic Premier Jack Lynch appealed for calm today following the British Army's capture of Northern Ireland's Catholic "no go" areas.

He said it was obvious that the street barricades of Londonderry and Belfast had to be removed sometime.

"Since the British government has decided to take them down now, I hope the same urgency will be applied in trying to remove the barricades of fear and hatred that exist between the two communities in the North," he said.

He asked moderates on both sides to be calm and said this approach would improve the climate for political talks.

Yeh Chien-ying Is Expected
To Succeed 'Traitor' Lin Piao

By James Pringle

PEKING, July 31 (Reuters).—Former Marshal Yeh Chien-ying—tipped as China's new defense minister—told the country's leaders at a banquet tonight that the schemes of traitors had been shattered.

The veteran revolutionary said the People's Liberation Army (PLA) had "shattered the criminal schemes of the traitors, enemy agents and careerists who wormed their way into the party to usurp the party's leadership, seize power and restore capitalism."

In all but name, the 71-year-old Yeh attacked the former defense minister, Lin Piao. On Friday the Chinese confirmed that Lin Piao was killed in a plane crash while fleeing the country last September after trying to overthrow Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

At tonight's banquet in the Great Hall of the People, almost the nation's entire leadership—except Chairman Mao—was present. The official occasion was the 45th anniversary of the founding of the PLA.

The genial-looking, bespectacled Mr. Yeh, who wore his army uniform tonight for only the second time in several years, is expected by many here to be appointed defense minister shortly. But he is not expected to be named as heir apparent to Chairman Mao, as Lin Piao was.

Today's traditional Army Day editorial in the Communist party journal, The People's Daily, declared that any careerist or conspirator who wanted to undermine the army was just daydreaming.

The editorial returned to the theme hammered home throughout China in recent months when it said that the army was a genuine people's army "under the absolute leadership of the party."

It said a mass campaign for military training in China was gaining momentum. "Our troops have been strengthened both militarily and politically," it added.

Tonight's banquet assembly was the biggest array of China's leadership since the eve of last year's Army Day.

Last year, Chief of Staff Huang Yung-sheng made a speech commemorating the PLA's founding. Mr. Huang disappeared at the same time as Lin Piao.

Mr. Yeh, a marshal before China abolished army ranks, and currently vice-chairman of the Central Committee's military commission, said he was speaking on behalf of all the commanders and fighters of the Chinese People's Liberation Army.

Others initially were objecting to bringing up the agreement at all, because President V. V. Giri had ratified it three days earlier after it was approved by Mrs. Gandhi's cabinet.

"This is a direct insult to Parliament," said Mr. Vajpayee, arguing that Parliament should have been consulted before the accord was ratified. (It is an affront and an insult.)

Even members whose parties support the treaty angrily objected to the discussion.

Communist members, whose party strongly backs the accord, shouted that discussion would be futile and an insult, since the agreement already was ratified.

At the direction of Mrs. Gandhi, who had sat impassively through the turmoil, Mr. Singh began reading the statement.

Eleven Jana Sangh members, screaming in protest, walked to the dais. Some sat on the floor. Two tore up documents they said were copies of the agreement and tossed the pieces into the air. All shouted, one into a microphone.

Mr. Singh's voice was inaudible over the clamor, but his prepared text said the agreement "provides a framework which, if faithfully worked out, can bring about an altogether new relationship between India and Pakistan."

After Mr. Singh read the statement and a motion approving it, members of Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party—three-fourths of the House—clapped their approval and the House was adjourned, the Jana Sangh still sitting and shouting.

Earlier all opposition parties except the Communists and a few independents had left the chamber for an hour after speaker G. S. Dhillon refused to allow a censure motion against the government over high prices.

As Foreign Minister Swaran Singh stood to read a prepared statement about the Simla accord with Pakistan, opposition members led by A. B. Vajpayee, leader of the Hindu-nationalist party Jana Sangh, objected noisily.

"Unless he apologizes to the House, we will not allow the proceedings to continue," Mr. Vajpayee shouted. He was joined by opposition members on the right and the left, and Mr. Singh sat down.

Mr. Vajpayee and most of the gleton withdraw from the ticket and campaign on behalf of Sen. McGovern and the new vice-presidential nominee.

Rep. Reuss refused to comment on his conversation with Sen. Eagleton today, however.

At the funeral in Louisiana, Sen. McGovern spent most of his time in the company of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, of Massachusetts, who had been offered the vice-presidential nomination and had declined it. Sen. Kennedy had been consulted by Sen. McGovern before Sen. Eagleton was chosen as the nominee, and the speculation was that Sen. McGovern today was again seeking Sen. Kennedy's advice, rather than his commitment to become a candidate.

Should Sen. Eagleton refuse to withdraw his candidacy there is no way that he could be compelled, under the Democratic party's rules, to do so. But his associates said that they doubted whether he would want to continue if Sen. McGovern made it explicit that he would prefer a replacement.

In his office this afternoon, Sen. Eagleton showed newsmen a copy of a book titled "Not Exactly a Crime," about the vice-presidency.

"Needless to say, I won't need this much longer," he said, holding up the book. Then he paused and said, "or maybe I will."

Despite his apparent and accustomed buoyancy, members of Sen. Eagleton's staff were less charitable toward Sen. McGovern. One aide said that Sen. McGovern appeared to have pulled the rug out from under Sen. Eagleton just when the tide of public opinion was turning his way.

I want to see him in the White House now or not," another Eagleton aide said of Sen. McGovern.

BONN, July 31 (AP).—Gerhard Schroeder, the Foreign Affairs Minister, said nothing stands in the way of Bonn's establishing relations with China in a few months.

Mr. Schroeder, a social democrat, returned today from a 14-day visit to China, where he met with Premier Zhou Enlai.

"Both sides came to a decision that there was no need to establish relations soon," Mr. Schroeder reported at a press conference.

This view had been long held and signed by both sides. He is the first German political leader to visit China since the end of World War II. His visit is the resumption of ties broken off in 1949.

From Bonn, Mr. Schroeder had ignored earlier statements that Bonn was to establish links with China. The fact that Mr. Schroeder had been invited to China was his policy of reconciliation toward the Soviet-led East European bloc, AP said.

Mr. Schroeder said East German press, his mission was "to and could turn out to be a catastrophe."

China accepts the power agreement regarding Berlin, held West Berlin, answer to questions.

Urging a normalization of relations before West German election on Schroeder pointed out, although West Germany's second-biggest partner, it is the only major European power to have no formal links with Bonn-Peking ties become an issue in it.

3 U.S. Planes
Crash in War;
One Is a B-52

North Vietnamese News Agency said.

The U.S. command reported no additional plane losses. It routinely withholds information while search and rescue operations are under way.

In the ground war, South Vietnamese marines on the northern front reported killing 58 enemy soldiers and capturing two in their biggest fight since taking over the battle for Quang Tri from the airborne division. The marines lost four dead and 17 wounded in the clash 14 miles north of the city, a communiqué said.

South Vietnamese infantrymen reported killing 27 enemy soldiers who attempted to cut Highway 1 at a point 10 miles south of Quang Tri.

Allied artillery fired 20,000 rounds of shells into Quang Tri City and the North Vietnamese stronghold inside the walled Citadel today, United Press International reported.

In Binh Dinh Province, on the central coast, heavy fighting was reported north of the district town of Bon Son and around Le Duc.

Not Enemy Action

The U.S. command said the B-52 went down as a result of unknown causes but apparently not as the result of enemy action. Eight other Stratofortresses have been lost accidentally since the big bombers first entered the Vietnam war more than seven years ago. None of the crashes were attributed to enemy fire. At least two B-52s, however, have been damaged by surface-to-air missiles during raids over North Vietnam.

The command reported the B-52 crashed about 300 miles northeast of Bangkok, about 40 minutes after taking off from U Tapao Air Base on the Gulf of Siam. Other B-52s from U Tapao and Guam made more than 100 strikes on North Vietnam, South Vietnam and Laos. Most were concentrated against enemy troop concentrations and gun positions around Quang Tri.

The command said one of the lost Phantom fighter-bombers ran out of fuel over North Vietnam while maneuvering to avoid a MIG interceptor. The second failed, for reasons unknown to the command, to rendezvous with a refueling tanker.

ANTWERP, Belgium, July 31 (AP).—Belgian unions today fulfilled a request by the British Transport and General Workers Union, and asked their members in the ports of Antwerp, Ghent and Zeebrugge to stop loading and unloading goods rerouted from British ports.

Art to Overrule

Aides See Politics in Bar Delay of Trial

By Fred P. Graham

July 31 (NYT).—The Pentagon and the Justice Department today applied to have the Supreme Court overrule the Douglas stay, the AP reported.

[Chief Justice Warren Burger gave attorneys for Mr. Ellender and Mr. Russo until noon EDT Wednesday to respond to the government's petition.]

Opening arguments were to have been presented to the jury today in the trial of Mr. Ellender and Mr. Russo for allegedly making public the top-secret study of the Vietnam war. But on Friday night, Justice Douglas issued a stay, blocking the trial until the Supreme Court rules on the defense's appeal on a writ of habeas corpus.

The question is whether the government must disclose details of a wiretap, not directed at any of the participants in this case, which picked up a conversation between an unknown party and a defense lawyer or consultant. On Thursday, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit ruled that no disclosure was required because the conversation did not concern the Pentagon papers case.

Within hours after it became known Saturday that Justice Douglas had issued the stay from his isolated mountain retreat in Goose Prairie, Wash., the Justice Department said it would ask the court to reverse the order.

In a statement issued from the Ellender-Russo defense office, Charles R. Nesson, a Harvard law professor who is one of Mr. Ellender's lawyers, said that "if Chief Justice Burger, a Nixon appointee, convenes a special session of the court, departing from the normal judicial process of reviewing constitutional issues, the implication can only be that this administration and this court see the 'politics' of the Pentagon papers case as of overriding importance."

A court official said that the defense will be furnished a copy of the government's application and will be given time to respond in writing before any action is taken. The defense team's statement said that it will oppose any review of Justice Douglas's stay.

Actions by the Supreme Court during its summer recess are so unusual that no firm procedures exist for handling them.

Democrats Link Shuttle Contract To Nixon Funds

WASHINGTON, July 31 (Reuters).—The Democratic National Committee charged today that political contributions to President Nixon's election campaign may have influenced the selection of North American Rockwell Corp. as the prime contractor for the U.S. space shuttle project.

Mrs. Jean Westwood, the new chairman of the Democratic committee, said in a statement that at least five of the current directors of the California corporation contributed $1,000 or more to President Nixon's campaign in 1968. She said other directors may have contributed this year.

She urged a congressional investigation into the award of the $2.6-billion contract to determine if the selection by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration was influenced by politics.

Three other major corporations bid for the contract. They are Lockheed of California, McDonnell-Douglas of Missouri and Grumman of New York.

Unemployment in the aerospace industry is especially heavy in California, a key state in President Nixon's re-election campaign.

Mass. Convict Murders 2, Is Found Dead

NORFOLK, Mass., July 31 (AP).

A convicted murderer, whose wife allegedly smuggled two pistols to him, killed a guard and an instructor and left another guard critically wounded at the Massachusetts Correctional Institution here today. He then barricaded himself and his wife in a dormitory where he was found dead several hours later, apparently a suicide victim.

Walter Elliott, 30, imprisoned two years ago after he was convicted of second-degree murder in a 1968 double slaying in South Boston, was found shot to death on the top floor of a prison dormitory where he and his wife, Katherine, had been held.

Mr. Elliott was found critically wounded and was rushed to a hospital in nearby Norwood. Norfolk County District Attorney George Burke charged her with smuggling the pistols to her husband during visiting hours this morning.

Mr. Burke said it appeared to be a "murder-suicide-type situation." He said Elliott had shot his wife in the head and then killed himself.

2 Pistols Used

The six-hour ordeal at the 700-room, medium-security institution 30 miles southwest of Boston began about 9:30 a.m. when Elliott rose from his seat in the visitors' room, pointed two pistols at the 17 other persons in the room and ordered three prison guards who were present to lie down.

"Two of the guards had gotten on the floor, face down," said Anne Kirchmiller, a reporter for the Boston Globe who was interviewing an inmate in the room.

"The next thing I knew the convict swore at the officer by the desk. Just what if anything, provoked the swearing I couldn't tell. I couldn't see the officer. But the convict fired," she said.

Officials said Elliott and his wife ran from the room after the guard was shot, then returned briefly while Elliott told others in the room: "I'm sorry about this."

The couple went to the prison yard where, officials said, the second guard and the instructor, who later died, were shot.

The Elliotts next raced to the dormitory and barricaded themselves in. Police stormed the dormitory after a tear-gas attack.

Mr. Burke said the two pistols were smuggled into the prison by Mrs. Elliott.

Bremer Trial Jury Chosen, It Hears Opening Statements

UPPER MERLBORO, Md., July 31 (AP).—A jury of six men and six women was selected rapidly today as Arthur H. Bremer went on trial for the attempted assassination of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

A panel of seven women and five men was chosen at first but preliminary challenges by attorneys altered the composition. Two male alternates were then seated on the jury.

Bremer has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the 17 charges in connection with the shooting which partially paralyzed Gov. Wallace and injured three others during a May 15 campaign rally at Laurel, Md.

"We're going to present evidence about the short, unhappy life of this young man," Benjamin Lipsitz, a defense attorney, said in an opening statement to the jury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

Mr. Lipsitz indicated that he would contest expected prosecution witnesses' testimony about the wounding of Gov. Wallace and the three others. But he devoted most of his 20-minute statement to projecting psychiatric testimony designed to support Bremer's plea of insanity.

Bremer, a 21-year-old former busboy and school janitor from Milwaukee, is accused of assaulting the four victims with a .38-caliber revolver carried in violation of Maryland gun laws.

Mr. Lipsitz, who also will defend Bremer against federal charges arising from the shooting, said he would call psychiatric and a clinical psychologist who had examined Bremer for the defense.

"All three people will tell you there is a good chance Mr. Bremer was sick from the day he was born, perhaps before he was born," the lawyer told the jury as his client sat at the defense table, turning frequently and smiling at spectators.

Bremer's hair has lengthened since his last public appearance, early in July, and he has grown a beard and a mustache since then.

Mr. Lipsitz said witnesses would testify that Bremer is a schizophrenic who "is pretty sick and has been for some time."

The lawyer said that Maryland law deems a defendant insane if he lacks "the substantial capacity" to appreciate the criminal nature of an act or to stop himself from committing such an act.

"The doctors will tell you Arthur Bremer doesn't know the difference between reality and fantasy. I don't know whether Arthur Bremer shot Gov. Wallace and three others May 15, and I'm not sure even Arthur Herman Bremer knows," Mr. Lipsitz said.

Regarding the facts of the attempted assassination, Mr. Lipsitz said the FBI laboratory was unable to say that the revolver recovered at the Laurel, Md., shopping center was the source of the bullets.

Mr. Lipsitz also said the FBI laboratory was unable to find any traces of gunpowder on paraffin "lifts" taken from Bremer's hands by county police shortly after his arrest at the shopping center.

The prosecutor spent only five minutes with his opening statement, telling the jury that Bremer is presumed sane unless proven otherwise. He said he would "show you Mr. Bremer was one of the first people at the shopping center and had all the opportunity to find a place in the crowd to carry out the attempted assassination."

The opening prosecution witness was Laurence W. Pierce of Dunwoody, Ga., a CBS News cameraman who recorded 16-mm sound footage of the shooting. The film was shown to the jury.

While Mr. Pierce said he had seen Bremer at an earlier political rally the morning of May 15 in Wheaton, Md., he said he was unable to recognize Bremer through his camera viewfinder as he made pictures of Gov. Wallace on the ground and the "total confusion."

Mr. Pierce was able to pick Bremer out of an estimated 100 persons in the courtroom. To arrange the identification attempt, the prosecution moved Bremer from the defense table to a fourth-row seat, flanked by deputies.

After three other eyewitnesses had failed, Mabel K. Speigle walked among the trial spectators and identified Bremer as Gov. Wallace's assailant.

47 Pct. in Poll Dislike Agnew's Performance

WASHINGTON, July 31 (UPI).—A Louis Harris public opinion survey said today that Spiro Agnew still receives a negative rating in response to a question about how good a job he is doing as Vice-President.

The poll said 47 percent of those questioned responded on the negative side, with only 45 percent giving him a positive rating. Eight percent were undecided. This, however, was 10 percent better than his 39-percent score in August, 1971.

Crew of Apollo-14 Also Took A Secret Load of Souvenirs

WASHINGTON, July 31 (NYT).

The Apollo-14 astronauts, without the knowledge of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, carried 300 silver medals coined by a private mint on their mission to the moon in January, 1971.

The medals, which commemorated the flight, were provided under the terms of a "private agreement" between the Franklin Mint, a Philadelphia company, and the three astronauts, Capt. Alan S. Shepard Jr., Cmdr. Edgar D. Mitchell and Maj. Stuart A. Roosa.

According to spokesmen for both NASA and the mint, no remuneration was involved, although the astronauts were permitted to retain 150 of the medals for their "private use." The medals were not taken to the surface of the moon but remained in the astronauts' "personal preference kits" on board the Apollo-14 command ship in lunar orbit.

The agreement with the mint was not known to the space agency, a NASA official explained, because at the time of the Apollo-14 flight, items carried by the astronauts in the kits were not subject to advance approval by the space agency.

He said that, partly as a result of the incident, restrictions on the carrying of personal items had been tightened for subsequent flights.

Earlier this month, the Apollo-15 astronauts, Col. David R. Scott, Lt. Col. James B. Irwin and Maj. Alfred M. Worden, were reprimanded by the space agency for smuggling 400 first-day stamp covers to the moon. After their flight, about 100 of the covers were placed on the market by a West German stamp dealer who allegedly obtained them from an acquaintance of the astronauts.

The Apollo-14 crew has not been reprimanded, the space agency said, since none of the medals have been offered for public sale.

The Franklin Mint said it melted down half the 50 medals returned to it by the Apollo-14 crew and used the silver to strike several thousand "mini-coins," which it distributed as gifts to its subscribers. None were offered for sale to the general public, a spokesman said, adding that the additional 25 medals had been locked in the mint's vault.

The space agency spokesman said the three astronauts kept some of their share of the medals and gave the rest to friends and co-workers as mementos of the flight. He added that a similar consignment of medals had been scheduled to go on the Apollo-15 flight, but that "because of the flap" the Apollo-14 medals raised within the space agency, the idea was dropped.

Nixons Attend Requiem Mass For Ellender

Other D.C. Notables At Louisiana Rites

HOUMA, La., July 31 (AP).—A requiem mass was offered today for Sen. Allen J. Ellender in a small-town church crowded with top U.S. political figures, including President Nixon.

The President was the last to arrive in a Washington contingent that included some 80 senators, representatives, cabinet members, admirals and generals.

Mr. Ellender died Thursday night at Bethesda Naval Hospital in Maryland. He was 31, Mr. Ellender was president pro tempore of the Senate, chairman of the Appropriations Committee and senior member of the Senate in age and length of service.

There was a ripple of applause as the President and Mrs. Nixon walked from a luncheon past the fountain in front of St. Francis of Sales Roman Catholic Church.

Agnew Arrives

Earlier, Vice-President Agnew entered the church, arriving a few minutes after the busloads of senators, which included Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic nominee for president, walking with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D. Mass.

Mississippi Gov. William Waller and Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards also were present.

A drizzle stopped shortly before the President arrived. A gleaming flag-draped coffin was carried by eight enlisted men in dress uniform, each representing a branch of the armed forces. They stepped in time to the tolling church bell.

After the mass and the singing of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," Mr. Ellender's body was taken to its final resting place at Magnolia Cemetery.

USAF Is Accused Of Deceit in Cost Of B-1 Bombers

WASHINGTON, July 31 (AP).

Rep. Les Aspin, D. Wis., has accused the Air Force of "attempting to deceive the Congress" about the cost of the B-1 bomber.

Mr. Aspin said yesterday that the Air Force estimates that each bomber will cost $45 million, while the Office of Systems Analysis estimates the cost at $60 million apiece. There are plans to build 244 bombers.

"Before the Congress approves this year's $448 million request for the B-1, this controversy must be settled," Mr. Aspin declared. He called on Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird "to resolve this obvious dispute within the Pentagon" and come up with new cost figures.

'71 Care Costs In U.S. Hospitals Up 13.9 Percent

CHICAGO, July 31 (AP).—The American Hospital Association reports that the cost of care for a hospital patient increased 13.9 percent in 1971.

The one-day cost was $92.31, the AHA reported yesterday in its annual survey of the 7,097 registered hospitals in the United States. The 1970 one-day average was $81.01, which was an increase of 15.7 percent over 1969.

Total expenses for community hospitals rose 14.5 percent during 1971, compared with 17.7 percent in 1970. Payroll expenses were up 14.2 percent in 1971, compared with 16.4 percent in 1970.

The AHA noted that the wage-price freeze and Phase-2 of the President's economic stabilization program—inaugurated Aug. 15—did not have a significant effect on the 1971 figures because the association's statistical survey period ended Sept. 1.

The AHA defines community hospitals as general hospitals. Not included are federal hospitals, the state psychiatric and tuberculosis hospitals, and long-term care facilities and other special hospitals.

Waldheim Sees No Rift With U.S.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., July 31 (AP).—Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim "does not think that recent events have led to any deterioration of relations between the United States and the United Nations," a spokesman said today.

President Nixon, at a news conference Thursday, criticized Mr. Waldheim for his earlier statement that he had private information from Hanoi that U.S. bombs had damaged North Vietnamese dikes, thus threatening floods. Mr. Waldheim called in ambassador George Bush Friday to discuss the matter.

The UN spokesman's remark was in response to questions about the conference.

Five 'Gentlemen' Robbers Rifle Safe Deposits at N.Y.'s Plaza

NEW YORK, July 31 (AP).—Five gunmen who were "real nice" and said "please," held up the Plaza Hotel early today and escaped with an estimated $50,000 in loot from guests' safe-deposit boxes.

The well-dressed gunmen, all mustachioed, locked 21 persons, including 18 hotel employees, in an office while they punched out the locks on at least eight of 125 safe-deposit boxes. They fled in a tan station wagon.

"It was 'Please do this,' 'Yes sir' and 'No sir,' whenever they wanted us to do anything," said Camille Parr, an auditor for the hotel. The people locked in the office were not robbed.

One of the boxes the thieves broke into was empty. The others had been used by jewelry firms during an exhibition last week.

A detective said the largest piece taken was a $32,500 emerald-and-diamond tiara owned by a Boston jewelry firm. It was the third such robbery in exclusive Manhattan hotels in seven months. The Drake was hit for $15,000 and an undetermined amount of other valuables at Christmas and the Pierre was robbed of up to $4 million in jewels at New Year's.

Towing Icebergs to California For Use as Water Is Studied

LOS ANGELES, July 31 (AP).

Two Rand Corp. researchers say it may be more economical to tow icebergs from Antarctica to quench the thirst of southern Californians than to pump northern California water to the south.

"Bringing icebergs to where the water is needed was suggested by John Isaacs of Scripps Institution of Oceanography here in the 1950s," says John Buit, one of two researchers awarded a National Science Foundation grant to develop an iceberg-delivery system.

"It is our job to show how practical it is," he said.

Mr. Buit and his research partner, Neil Osterlander, estimate that iceberg water can be delivered for $80 an acre-foot. It costs $65 an acre-foot to pump water to southern California from the Tehachapi Mountains.

"It will take less energy to tow two million acre-feet of water all the way from Antarctica to southern California than it now does to pump 2 million acre-feet of water over the Tehachapis," Mr. Osterlander said.

Because of their shape and stability, icebergs could be lashed with cable, arranged in trains and towed north, the researchers said.

The scientists said about 10 percent of the icebergs' water would be lost in transit.

Once in southern California waters, the icebergs could be tied off shore and quarried. Large chunks would be cut off and then floated to an offshore tower. There they would be lifted onto conveyors and fed into flexible pipes to be carried to shore.

The Antarctic is a mammoth source of fresh water, the researchers note, pointing out that 75 percent of the earth's fresh water is ice and 90 percent of it is Antarctic ice.

Because of their shape and stability, icebergs could be lashed with cable, arranged in trains and towed north, the researchers said.

A-Protest Vessel Missing in Pacific

AUCKLAND, N.Z., July 31 (Reuters).

The New Zealand protest vessel Boy Roel, which sailed for the French nuclear test zone in the Pacific earlier this month with five men aboard, has been officially declared missing.

The vessel set sail on July 2. The organizers said today that they had received a message from the French authorities in Tahiti that it had not arrived in the Mururoa Atoll test area. The last message received from the vessel, skippered by a master mariner, was heard on July 6.

A spokesman for the organizer, Peace Media Research Association, said it had asked for an air search of the area tomorrow in an effort to find the men.

Mr. Europe

Before the Second World War, he was the very young prime minister of Belgium; he lived out many storms to endure into the present like some survivor of heroic times. Paul-Henri Spaak has a prominent place in Belgian political history, but for the world he was "Mr. Europe," a massive figure in the formation of so many of the institutions which characterize the continent today.

Certainly Mr. Spaak was not the only shaper of modern Europe. Rather he was one of a distinguished company—Jean Monnet and Robert Schuman of France, Alcide de Gasperi of Italy, Konrad Adenauer of West Germany, Winston Churchill and Harold Macmillan of Britain among many others—who recognized that in the wreckage of a continent, torn by its own dissensions, must be born a new spirit and new ways of thought and action. And (let it not be forgotten) with the moral and material aid of the United States, the Europe of the Common Market and of NATO came into being.

But if Spaak, once a Belgian neutralist, was by no means alone, or even foremost in initiating the work, the posts he held, no less than the inspiration and hard work he supplied, were immensely significant in recasting a continent. He presided over the United Nations General Assembly in 1946; he was president as well of the consultative assembly of the Council of Europe in 1949, and in 1957 he took office as secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He played leading roles in Benelux, the first core of the Common Market, and especially in defining the form of the market itself. It was an impressive feat by a man who had no great national power behind him, but a consuming desire to end the wasting rivalries that made a mockery of Europe's pre-eminence in the world.

And he wrought well. Today, one concentrates on the difficulties of such institutions as the European Economic Community and the weakening of NATO, without considering that these are, after all, facts—facts that may yet make the withered hopes of the Council of Europe flourish again into political reality. The nations of Western Europe are at peace with one another, and fundamentally prosperous, whatever internal troubles may plague them, and that peace, based on a strong West, is extending across the Elbe to embrace the East.

Who, in the 1940s, could have imagined states, then tearing at one another's throats, would be cooperating as closely as France and Germany do today? Who could have guessed, in the 1950s, that East and West Germany would be negotiating, that there would be as little tension along a dilapidated Iron Curtain, as now? The death of Paul-Henri Spaak can be a reminder of how this was achieved, and of the many, now dead or half-forgotten, who achieved it. Let "Mr. Europe" be honored as the symbol of a great cause.

Inconsistencies on Vietnam

Mr. Nixon's complaint that "well-intentioned and naive" people like Kurt Waldheim have been "taken in" by enemy propaganda about bombing North Vietnamese dikes ignores two crucial facts. First, there would be no propaganda if there were no bombing. Second, the President himself is the real author of the "propaganda," for the reason that three months ago, as part of a deliberate campaign to intimidate Hanoi and bring it to negotiate on his terms, he began to hint carefully that under certain conditions the dikes could be bombed. Last Thursday he said that on April 30 at the Connally ranch he had declared he would not bomb the dikes. In fact, his remarks of April 30 were by no means so categorical. He said then:

"...we will continue to make strikes on military targets throughout North Vietnam. Now, the problem that is raised with regards to dams or dikes is that, while it is a strategic target and indirectly a military target, it would result in an enormous number of civilian casualties. That is something that we need to avoid. It is also something we believe is not needed. ...we are prepared to use our military and naval strength against military targets throughout North Vietnam, and we believe that the North Vietnamese are taking a very great risk if they continue their offensive in the South. ...I will just leave it there, and they can make their own choice."

When Mr. Nixon thought it might serve his own purpose, he dangled ambiguities about bombing dikes. Only now, when three additional months of fierce bombing evidently have not produced a negotiating breakthrough and when eyewitnesses have reported some dike damage (however unintentional) and when a world outcry has broken out, does the administration offer a belated report on 12 instances of "minor" bomb damage to the dikes—while the President perceives "enemy-inspired propaganda."

As for his complaint of a "double standard" leveled against critics of his policy who don't also criticize enemy attacks on South Vietnamese civilian installations, it is almost embarrassing to have to explain that the violence committed by parties in what is essentially a civil war—however deplorable—is of a very different political and moral order from violence committed by a foreign country intervening in that conflict to uncertain purpose and equally uncertain effect. It seems almost superfluous to add that the standard of American conduct in war really ought not to be fixed, or justified, in terms of the conduct of the North Vietnamese.

Mr. Nixon's reminder that the country has only one President at a time—intended to put down congressmen who doubt he can soon end the American part in the war—is no less off the mark. It was, after all, Richard Nixon who declared on March 10, 1971: "Those who think Vietnam is going to be a good political issue next year are making a grave miscalculation. Now I am applying our policy there not for political reasons, but for reasons of national security. Nevertheless, those who are counting on Vietnam as a political issue in this country next year are going to have the rug jerked from under them."

The President was saying then, as we read him, that he would end the war by election day. If that was a pledge to the American electorate (and a warning to his domestic political opposition), then it was also a notice to Hanoi that he had to have a settlement to run successfully for re-election.

Mr. Nixon protests now that war critics in Congress are undercutting his negotiating position with anti-war speeches and votes. But to the extent that he meant what he said earlier, he was undercutting his own negotiating position—by imposing on his own diplomacy a deadline for American disengagement more rigorous than any that might have been imposed by the various measures that have been debated in Congress. He is in the insupportable position of claiming that it is acceptable for American diplomacy to be circumscribed by his own definition of his political requirements but not by the political requirements of his opposition and not by the widespread and growing popular sentiment for an early end to our involvement in Vietnam on almost any terms.

Dark Forces in Britain

Britain's Prime Minister Heath, a rationalist, is engaged in a struggle with dark, anarchic forces over issues important not only for the welfare of the British people but for Europe and the rest of the world as well. The common law and its validity constitute a pillar of liberal Western civilization. In the 19th century the British trade unions fought for the rights of an exploited lower class. Today they rampage like medieval feudal barons. And the Irish extremists of both camps are like highwaymen, blackmailing the general public by violently taking the law into their own hands. There cannot be the shadow of a doubt that the Industrial Relations Act must be maintained, not only with words but in practice—and in Ulster the alternative to the course being pursued by Heath and Whitelaw would be civil war.

—From the Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich).

In the International Edition

Seventy-Five Years Ago

August 1, 1897

NEW YORK.—The Assistant-Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, reviewed and inspected the New York and Brooklyn naval battalions yesterday. In an address on the occasion he said: "The number of ships available for duty must be doubled, tripled, before a halt is called. We want more ships, more officers and more men to man them. Battleships, armored cruisers and vessels of the torpedo class are the types of vessels most needed."

Fifty Years Ago

August 1, 1922

NEW YORK.—In the Davis Cup trials here today, Big Bill Tilden and his partner, the youthful marvel Vincent Richards, received a severe and most unexpected setback at the hands of Morris Williams and Watson Washburn. The latter pair defeated the champion and his partner in three straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, 7-5, while a large gallery looked on in silent amazement. Tilden was off form and his playing was inferior to the other three.

The New 1972 Agnew

By Lou Cannon

WASHINGTON.—The government official's right and power to administer his office is and should be subject to the responsible surveillance of an independent press, the speaker declared. "Far from being threatened, the public interest is enhanced by such responsible journalism."

The words are familiar to anyone who ever has attended a gathering of editors, but the members of the National Newspaper Association were accustomed to hearing other words from the man who spoke them. The speaker was Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, the same man who precisely 26 months to the day earlier had described the nation's "liberal news media" as "those really illiberal, self-appointed guardians of our destiny who would like to run the country without ever submitting to the elective process as we in public office must do."

There are real evidences these days of a "new Agnew," or perhaps of "another Agnew." While the attention of the press had been focused on the trials and tribulations of Sen. Thomas Eagleton, the Vice-President has succeeded in mollifying many of the critics within his own party who had not wished him to have a second term. These critics generally accepted Agnew's ability and his dedication but they were afraid that fondness for negative rhetoric would obscure the presidential theme of positive accomplishment.

When the Republican re-election campaign was first conceived, it was widely assumed that Agnew would perform the familiar "attack role" usually reserved for vice-presidents. But Mr. Nixon himself, speaking to his cabinet and his staff before the Eagleton disclosures, made it clear that he wanted a positive campaign, not one that divides into high and low roads at all.

Focus on Policies

"The campaign will deal with policies, not personalities," says campaign chief Clark MacGregor, adding that Agnew's role will be a positive one that stresses such issues as economic progress and revenue sharing.

This is welcome news to Republican organizers, most of whom value Agnew as a campaigner. "He is a good soldier who will speak to 16 people in the rain in the middle of the night if you need him," one Western GOP field organizer said last week. "He also raises money."

A few Republican professionals think that a tamer, plainer Agnew won't be as exciting a speaker as the old Agnew. This is unlikely. "Agnew can back off several degrees and speak pointedly about policies instead of personalities and he'll still be a hit," says the organizer who likes the "good soldier" side of the Vice-President. "He communicates emotionally, and he'll still communicate."

This organizer's insight into the value of Agnew on the ticket is matched by a Washington-based Republican official who believes that Mr. Nixon would have replaced the Vice-President only if Agnew had volunteered to be replaced.

"Nixon is a chess player," he says, using the metaphor of the game whose popularity may yet replace Chinese cooking. "He doesn't like to sacrifice a pawn if he doesn't have to. He's worried about the 200,000 Ashbrook votes, he's worried about the 25,000 right-wing votes in Allegheny County in Pennsylvania, he's worried about the South. He wants to win with 100 percent of the vote."

So we are left with an Agnew who apparently intends soberly and skillfully to discuss, as he did before the Newspaper Association, the necessity of both editors and government officials forgoing "harangue and cliché in favor of discussion based on reason and public interest." It is a pose, Agnew's critics will say, and we will be left with the same Agnew after the election.

This view ignores the persistent reality of Mr. Nixon's own presidency, the same reality that faces any representative of a minority party who wants to govern and to be remembered as a good President. If Agnew joins Mr. Nixon on the "high road" in the election, he is going to enhance his own reputation and his own chances for the presidency next time. If the high road works in the election campaign, Agnew may well stay there. For it is also the road to the presidency.

Ellsberg in the Dock

By William F. Buckley Jr.

LOS ANGELES.—Daniel Ellsberg is leading a very public life during his trial for divulging government secrets. It is, to say the least, unusual to give press conferences, and appear on television, while a jury weighs evidence of your alleged misdeeds. Dan Ellsberg's team knows what it's up to. It seeks every kind of publicity for its principal. The concern here is less for law—though they appear to be having quite a legal frolic—than for ideology. Like the Chicago Seven, the point they want to make is extra-legal. Dan Ellsberg is concerned to publicize his case against the United States government and the Vietnam war, and he assumes that the lawyers will take care of the matter of keeping him out of jail.

On the face of it, it looks to be a dangerous assignment. Daniel Ellsberg, defendant, has been indicted on 15 counts for stealing and mishandling government property, improperly receiving and communicating documents relating to the national defense, and conspiring to obstruct the United States by obstructing its control over classified documents. If he were found guilty on all counts, he could be sent up for 115 years. Nobody expects him to go to jail for 115 years. Not many people expect him to go to jail at all.

The Big Count

The government has not chosen to go after Ellsberg on the Big Count—the Espionage Act that forbids the disclosure of a government secret "with intent or reason to believe that it is to be used to the injury of the United States or the advantage of a foreign nation." In this connection, it is instructive to recall the motives of Daniel Ellsberg for releasing the documents. Every one knows that he became an anti-war evangelist. But last March Ellsberg reminded before an audience most specifically. He said that he remembered the exact moment when he decided to release the secret papers. It was after a Yale-Harvard football game in the fall of 1970, and the report reached him that President Nixon was determined to renew the bombing of Hanoi, and that he was even contemplating an invasion of North Vietnam.

Now if one agrees that an invasion of North Vietnam is a disadvantage to North Vietnam, and that Ellsberg intended, by releasing the Pentagon Papers, to diminish the chances of such an invasion, then it follows that Ellsberg's intent was that the information he released should be used to the advantage of a foreign nation.

New Breed

Sure, he also believed that it was to the advantage of the United States to desist from further military action in South Vietnam, even as Klaus Fuchs thought it to the ultimate advantage of Great Britain to give away our atomic secrets to the Soviet Union. But the people who designed the Espionage Act were not universalists in that sense. What they meant to discourage was the kind of thing Benedict Arnold did.

Ellsberg isn't Benedict Arnold. He is rather one of the new breed of international moralists who discern a great abyss between themselves and the rest of the world. The rest of the world, as far as this breed is concerned, consists of moral craters, "fiars" (one of Ellsberg's favorite words). Ellsberg likes to introduce himself before college audiences by saying "I come before you as a war criminal." That sounds awfully humble. But students of rhetoric know the device as self-serving. What he means is: the gang in Washington are war criminals. I was a war criminal because I was one of them—until I saw the light. So that the point he is really stressing is not that he was once a war criminal—a part of his background that no one in the United States is at this point disposed to criticize—but that he no longer is one. The force of the remark is therefore to brand people like John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, McGeorge Bundy, Arthur Schlesinger, Robert McNamara, by dissociation with them, as war criminals. That charge, historically and morally preposterous, is an index of the moral epimania of Daniel Ellsberg concerning whom Murray Kempton, always an opponent of the war, wrote recently that he "always goes too far... too far then, in his moral allegiance to the war, too far now in his moral wrath against its authors."

Meanwhile, there are those who wonder whether the government of war criminals has enough self-confidence actually to enforce its own regulations.

From Russia With Cau

The Graceful E

By Jim Hoagland

CAIRO.—Apparently determined to minimize the loss of face it has already suffered and to protect other important Russian interests in the Middle East, the Soviet Union has staged its military retreat from Egypt with a speed and thoroughness that has surprised experienced diplomatic observers here.

"In some ways, the Russian exit has been the most graceful part of their entire military involvement here," one Westerner said wryly.

"There has not been one sign of contrivance President Sadat's decision to send all Russian military advisers home, he said, 'for of their wanting to get involved in what could be messy negotiations over who and what can stay. Right now, it appears that virtually everything is going.'"

The withdrawal has shaken some of the basic assumptions that many Western analysts had held about the Soviet perception of its role in the big-power competition for influence in the volatile Middle East. As the military class of the Russians bear seem to retreat, at least slightly, new significance is being attached to the political and economic ties it has assiduously developed with Middle Eastern governments over the past decade.

Coupled with Sadat's public criticisms of the Kremlin for its "overly cautious" attitude toward the Middle East weapons balance, the hasty evacuation suggests to some observers here that Moscow was far less comfortable with its heavy military commitment in this region than had been generally imagined.

Nothing to Fear

"The Russians are proving to other Arab countries that there is nothing to fear from the Russian presence," a middle-level Egyptian official told a newspaper. "It can be removed much easier than could the Western colonial presence. The Russians know it is in their long-term interests to go without bitterness, or at least without public bitterness."

Eight Soviet military transport planes filled with slightly more than 100 Russian advisers have left Egypt almost daily over the past two weeks, well-informed sources have disclosed. There has also been movement of Soviet personnel from Alexandria, where the Russians have used naval facilities. Analysts now expect a major reduction there as Egyptians take over much of that facility.

The Russians are reportedly also turning over a number of advanced model MIG-21 jets, previously under Russian command, to Egyptians. But the Russian compliance with President Sadat's bold order extends to sophisticated weaponry as well, according to reliable sources.

When their airlift finishes toward the end of next week, the Russian military establishment here will have been swiftly reduced from an estimated 15,000 to 20,000 men to a few thousand instructors.

"The Russians could always bring all of this back quickly," consultations with the Egyptians indicate they should come back," a diplomatic source said. "But you have to wonder how eager they would be to do it after this." Sadat's ouster of the Russians, which diplomatic sources speculate may have gone faster and further than even the Egyptian president expected when he suggested consultations, represents a culmination of important political and ideological differences that have surfaced recently between the Russians and Arab countries that had been assumed by many Westerners to be Moscow's firm allies.

Following Sadat's May, 1972, of leading leftists within the Arab Union, the country's official party, diplomats at what seemed last year to attempt to diversify beyond the pro-government.

This appeared to be of a policy that he failed. In 1968, he had encouraged the Communist party to self and work with Sadat effectively new tactic with his 1971.

There has been from the Egyptian disarray since last year to Sadat's ouster of it. "It will still be much know if there is an infrastructure left. diplomat. 'If these Sadat's decision don't have changed any there could be a back."

In the meantime, Russians are keeping selves. Whatever the differences that separate them from their Middle Eastern allies, virtually all of whom are still far away from establishing Marxist socialism internally and who have repressed communist parties, the Arab countries become increasing Moscow's commitment change to the left lock, which has a cupation of Egypt and Syrian last years.

Gorbach, 74, Leader Austria From 1961 to 1964

FRANKFURT, West Germany, July 31 (UPI)—Franz Gorbach, 74, who was editor from 1961 to 1964 of the Austrian newspaper Die Presse, died today following a long illness.

A native of Cologne, he studied law at Bonn, Wuppertal, Cologne and Munich. He also appeared in a number of television films and movies.

A spokesman for the Munich Residence Theater said Mr. Gorbach was in Regensburg on a private visit when death occurred.

Alfred Gorbach, in '61, when he was Austrian Chancellor.

Paul-Henri Spaak, a Father Of Postwar Europe, Dies

Mr. Spaak was a lawyer, journalist and poet as well as a statesman and diplomat. He was a master of repartee, with a delightful sense of humor.

In 1938, he became one of the youngest members of the European Council. After resigning over a domestic issue in 1939, he was foreign minister again in the wartime coalition government in exile in Britain and in the first postwar Government of National Unity.

Promoted Benelux

In March, 1946, Mr. Spaak played a prominent part in the promotion of Benelux—the economic union of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—became premier again but resigned after 10 days when his government failed to win a vote of confidence. He began his third term as premier in 1947 and served until 1950, holding concurrently the portfolio of foreign affairs.

In 1948, he went to the United States, where he was the first foreign minister to sign the Atlantic Pact. He again became foreign minister in 1954 and also held the post from 1961 to 1965.

He played a leading role in the negotiations on the Treaty of Rome creating the Common Market in 1957. Agreement between France and its partners might have been impossible without his conciliatory diplomacy.

Mr. Spaak married twice. His first wife, Marguerite, by whom he had three children—a son and two daughters—died in August, 1964. In April, 1966, Mr. Spaak married Simone Desir.

Messages of Sympathy From Wire Dispatches

BRUSSELS, July 31.—Messages of sympathy poured into Brussels today on the death of Mr. Spaak. The Commission of the European Economic Community, in a communiqué, said, "Europe has lost one of its fathers."

In Strasbourg, the Council of Europe said: "A brilliant eloquence and great political lucidity contributed to place President Spaak among those who built postwar Europe. His memory will remain everlasting. His work is an example and source of inspiration."

Giuseppe Vedovato, president of the Assembly of the Council of Europe, said in Strasbourg: "History will tell that Paul-Henri Spaak was one of the greatest among the great constructors of Europe. In the name of the 17 member countries of the council, I express the deep emotion of those who know that the unification of Europe has suffered a deep loss."

Joseph Luns, NATO secretary-general, said in a telegram: "All people who have known this great statesman will faithfully preserve his memory. Paul-Henri Spaak worked throughout his life for the great cause of peace, of respect for the human being, of the creation of Europe and of the defense of the Atlantic area."

Other tributes:

• In London, Prime Minister Edward Heath said: "Paul-Henri Spaak gave a lifetime of public service to his own country. In Britain, and throughout Western Europe, he will be remembered above all as one of the principal architects of European recovery after the Second World War and as one of the founding fathers of the movement toward European unity."

• In Bonn, Chancellor Willy Brandt said in a telegram to the Belgian Socialist party, on behalf of his own Social Democratic party: "We mourn in Paul-Henri Spaak a great politician in the best Socialist tradition."

• A spokesman for the Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs noted Mr. Spaak's contribution in the creation of Benelux and the European Common Market and said: "The Dutch government will always be grateful for his initiatives."

More Talks Held By U.S.-Soviet Panel on Trade

MOSCOW, July 31 (Reuters).—U.S. Commerce Secretary Peter Peterson today met with Soviet Foreign Trade Minister Nikolai Patolichev at another plenary session of the new U.S.-Soviet Joint Economic Commission.

There was no word on progress in the past week's meetings of the commission, set up during President Nixon's visit here in May.

But Mr. Peterson saw Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev for three hours during a flying visit to the latter's summer home in the Crimea yesterday, and this suggested that agreement on a long-term trade pact might be near, observers said.

According to American sources, the two discussed possibilities of joint economic ventures in Siberia and other long-term trade prospects.

Mr. Peterson is scheduled to leave here tomorrow.

Consumer Group Calls Anti-Bug Products a Peril

WASHINGTON, July 31 (AP).—Consumers' Union has warned against using bug-killing floor waxes, shelf papers and vaporizing strips.

The products, some of which are under attack by the federal government as well, were described in the latest issue of Consumer Reports magazine as containing dangerous chemicals which are released for a long time.

"We don't agree," said a spokesman for the maker of the largest-selling product taken on by the independent, nonprofit product-testing organization.

"The chemical used in this pest strip breaks down to a completely innocuous compound almost as soon as it enters the body," said a spokesman for Shell Oil Corp., maker of the Shell No-Pest strip.

All of the pest strips were listed by Consumers' Union as containing an insecticide called dichlorvos.

The government has tried to ban shelf papers containing lindane and chlordane, two persistent insecticides, because of their use in food cupboards. Several firms have delayed the action by appealing to the courts.

Peking to Exhibit Calif. Children's Art

SAN MATEO, Calif., July 31 (AP).—A display of children's art including drawings, painting and sewing is being taken to Peking next month as part of a cultural exchange between the United States and China.

Dick Sparicin, arts consultant to the San Mateo City School District, said many persons, including presidential security adviser Henry A. Kissinger, helped arrange the exchange. The display has been in the White House, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the Smithsonian Institution, Mr. Sparicin said.

Millions Homeless, More Told To Flee Floods in Philippines

MANILA, July 31 (Reuters).—The Philippines Red Cross and armed forces today urged residents of Luzon's flood-ravaged central plains to flee their homes within the next 24 hours because dams and dikes show signs of collapsing.

In the mountain city of Baguio, 125 miles north of Manila, the mayor ordered an evacuation of families in areas threatened by landslides. At least 31 persons have been killed there in slides triggered by two weeks of monsoon rains.

An estimated two million people on the northern island of Luzon are already homeless, and last night President Ferdinand Marcos, after a tour of the stricken areas, ordered officials to carry out evacuations if the floodwaters appeared to be rising.

The provinces of Laguna and Rizal near here continue to be threatened by a spillover from Laguna de Bay, the country's biggest lake in which the waters are continuing rising. Some 10,000 families have abandoned their homes in the area.

Press reports say that five lake-side villages are under at least 10 feet of water and that the lake, 35 miles southeast of Manila, has spilled as far as three miles over the shoreline in places.

In Manila, which has been isolated from outlying cities by heavy flooding, a mass immunization drive was under way today to prevent disease, Health Department spokesmen said.

As reports of floods reached Manila, appeals for more relief goods were channeled to the National Red Cross and other government relief agencies.

The Weather Bureau in Manila today reported that more rain was expected tonight and warned ships of rough waters around northern coasts.

Police sources said military authorities have pulled out an undisclosed number of troops from anti-guerrilla operations in the northern Philippines and redeployed them on flood-relief work.

Radio reports here indicated that up to 50,000 people in the central plains north of Manila are facing starvation because of the difficulty of getting supplies to them.

Floods in India

NEW DELHI, July 31 (Reuters).—Destructive floods in four eastern states of India have taken at least 92 lives in the last four days, according to latest reports.

Up to three million people are reported to have been affected in Assam, West Bengal, Orissa and Bihar.

Thousands of cattle have perished as the 500-mile Brahmaputra Valley in Assam was engulfed following heavy rains.

Communications between Assam and the rest of the country are virtually cut off. Troops in helicopters and assault craft are mouning a rescue operation for thousands of stranded villagers.

At least 28 persons are feared to have drowned when their boat capsized in the flooded Nahananda River last Friday near

Vatican Bells (Luckily) False

VATICAN CITY, July 31 (UPI).—All 11 bells shrilled across Vatican City today and a cry of "Bank robbers" went up as guards slammed shut the great bronze doors of the 108-acre city-state.

Fifteen minutes later the doors swung open, and guards took away barricades from the many entrances to St. Peter's Basilica.

The robbery scare was caused by a short circuit in the alarm system at the Institute for Religious Works. Pope Paul VI was not at the Vatican. He is staying at the papal summer palace at Castel Gandolfo, south of Rome.

Monsoon in Bangladesh

DACCA, July 31 (Reuters).—Some 800,000 people are marooned in the Rangpur district of northern Bangladesh following heavy monsoon rains, official sources said here today.

Continuous rain in the last three days and onrushing waters from upper Assam, in neighboring India, have flooded about 2,000 square miles, they said.

Relief organizations in Dacca are planning an airdrop of supplies in affected areas.

Spassky's Cold Seems Gone, He Says He Will Play Today

REYKJAVIK, July 31 (Reuters).—World chess champion Boris Spassky, his nervous system shaken by Bobby Fischer's skill and bewildering tantrums, played tennis happily here today during his rest from the match.

As he played outside the Saga Hotel, where he is staying, he looked cold which caused last night's ninth game to be postponed until tomorrow.

Spassky, trailing by three points to five in the 24-game series, showed no signs of the cold when he came down to lunch in the grill room yesterday but seemed to be suffering slightly from nervous strain.

Last night in the hotel lobby the Russian said, "I did not feel well on Sunday morning, but now I am much better and will certainly meet Fischer on Tuesday."

Observers have said that Spassky's application for a rest was due more to nerves than to a cold.

But Fischer's second, the Rev. William Lombardy, said he was not surprised that Spassky had a head cold in view of the rainy, cold weather in Iceland in the past week.

He added that maybe Fischer will also have a cold by tomorrow and be unable to play. So far, Fischer's health seems unimpaired.

A favorite theme of observers is that Fischer, constantly protesting, turning up late, going into a huff, as well as playing with flair, has unnerved Spassky and now dominates the championship.

For Yugoslav grand master

Svetozar Gligoric, the issue is by no means settled. He says that he knows Spassky is a much better player than he has shown himself to be so far and that Spassky may easily recover his form.

Argentine grand master Miguel Najdorf, on the other hand, says there is no point in playing any longer and he intends to leave for London.

He is certain Fischer is going to win and says he was bitterly disappointed with the quality of play in the eighth game, which Spassky lost badly.

American Express International Banking Corporation announces the opening of an office in Singapore.

THE SECOND fastest growing city in Asia. The fourth busiest port in the world. The second highest national per capita income in Asia.

That's Singapore. So it's little wonder that last month we opened our newest office there on Raffles Quay.

Our Singapore office is the 49th in the international banking network of American Express International Banking Corporation and subsidiaries. Now in nineteen countries. Which adds up to more foreign branches and offices of wholly owned subsidiaries than 99 percent of the banks doing international business. And each office is linked to a satellite communications system. In effect, it gives these offices nineteen hours a day to make foreign exchange transactions. Result: You can often get the best exchange rate available anywhere in the world.

Our Singapore office is also the new headquarters for our Asian Currency Unit—a counterpart to our Eurodollar Center in London. We accept U.S. dollar deposits and lend them to Asian companies or to multinational companies for their eastern hemisphere operations. Our Asian depositors benefit not only from the interest their dollars will earn, but also from the regional economic growth their dollars will help to generate.

Of course, through our full-service international banking facility, we can provide import/export financing and arrange global lines of credit. And LBAmer, Ltd., a company owned jointly with Lazard Brothers, London, has a representative in our Singapore office to help you with medium-term loan syndications.

Which are just some of the reasons we think our Singapore office—or any part of this international banking network—could help you build your profits.

Olympic Flame Burns Bishop As 'Idolatry'

ATHENS, July 31 (AP).—A conservative Greek Orthodox bishop has condemned as "idolatry" the lighting ceremony of the Olympic Flame that took place Friday.

Augustinos, Metropolitan of Florina, in northern Greece, urged Greek Orthodox bishops and priests to boycott the planned ceremonies when the flame, being carried by runners to Munich, passes through their districts.

In a distributed circular, Augustinos said, "Lighting a flame at an altar of Zeus and addressing prayers to him is unacceptable to Christian belief."

The bishop was referring to the lighting ceremony at Olympia, where Greek actress Maria Alifanidou lit the Olympic torch after a prayer to Zeus.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Deutsche Bank Half-Year Results Gain

Deutsche Bank's operating profit in the first six months of this year was slightly more than half of last year's total operating results due to higher than expected earnings in the securities and foreign exchange business. The company said its operating profit for the first half of 1972 was 38.3 billion Deutsche marks at the end of June from 35.19 billion DM at the end of December while its total volume of business increased 8.9 percent to 39.53 billion DM.

'Stable' Profits Seen at Sté. Générale

First-half results of Sté. Générale de Belgique, Belgium's largest holding company, indicate unchanged net income this year but a decline in operating results. The company says first-half results, which it did not disclose, confirm previous expectations that net profit for the full year would be "stable" compared with 1971. Dividends from companies in the group had declined, as expected, but these were partially offset by a considerable improvement in earnings from financial activities, such as loans to group companies. As it receives virtually all of its gross income (1.2 billion Belgian francs) about 82 million out of 141 billion francs in 1971 from dividends and financial activities, the "partial offset" indicates that overall earnings were lower.

Consolidated Foods Forecasts Profit

Consolidated Foods Corp. expects to report operating earnings for the fiscal June 30 year of $2.42 to $2.45 a share, against a restated $2.23 a year ago, chairman William A. Buzick Jr. reports and says he looks for an even bigger gain in fiscal 1973. The estimated fiscal 1972 profit is a bit higher than most analysts' estimates of about $2.40 a share. "We had an excellent fourth quarter, probably better than anyone outside the company realizes," Mr. Buzick says. However, the company will have two extraordinary charges against earnings for the year totaling $4 million to $4.5 million, or 16 to 17 cents a share.

Japanese Vehicle Exports Off

Japan's motor vehicle exports in June fell 31.9 percent compared with June 1971, to 103,901 units from 153,658 units. The Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association attributes the decline chiefly to the three-month-long Japanese seamen's strike and diminished competitiveness resulting from the yen revaluation. The June export total comprised 68,583 cars; 34,787 trucks, and 561 buses. For the first six months of this year, exports of 942,757 units were 18.3 percent higher in June last year.

CFP to Resume Loading of Iraqi Oil

Oil Française des Pétroles (CFP) has signed an agreement "on a provisional basis" with Iraq to resume loading of crude oil from the recently nationalized Kirkuk oilfields. The loadings are in line with an agreement signed in June under which Iraq will supply France with 10 million tons of crude a year for 10 years, CFP explains. This allows CFP to purchase an amount of oil equivalent to its 33.15 percent share in the Iraq Petroleum Co. following the latter's nationalization.

Royal Dutch-Shell Still No. 1

Japanese Top Fortune List With 75 Firms

NEW YORK, July 31 (AP).—For the second year in a row the Japanese magazine's list of the largest industrial companies outside the United States—placing 75 firms in the 300 listed.

Britain is second with 64 companies and West Germany places third with 44.

The No. 1 spot is kept by Royal Dutch-Shell, with sales equal to $12.7 billion.

Sales of the top 300 in the new list for 1971 were 14.2 percent higher than last year's top 300 (fortune this year expended its list to 300). But profits dropped by 10.7 percent. Fifteen of these companies lost money, the biggest loser being Italy's Montedison, which had a staggering deficit equivalent to $272 million on sales of $3.3 billion.

France's Citroën, top loser on last year's list, rode back into profit. But the steel industry continued prominently represented among the losers, with British Steel, Ralsider, Rheinstahl and Hindustan all contributing to loss money.

The top companies, based on annual sales, after Shell include: Unilever, unchanged from 1970 in second place.

British Petroleum, up from fifth place a year earlier.

Philips, unchanged from last year.

Volkswagen, down from third place in 1970.

Nippon Steel, unchanged in sixth place.

Utility Prices Up

PARIS, July 31 (AP-DJ).—The French Finance Ministry has authorized an average 4 percent increase in domestic prices for gas and electricity, effective Aug. 1. It also announced an average 2 percent reduction in domestic fuel oil prices and a 4 percent cut for heavy fuel oil, also effective Aug. 1.

Siemens, up from No. 10 a year ago.

Imperial Chemical Industries, down from seventh place last year.

Kitachi, which was also No. 9 last year.

Nestlé, up from 25th place a year ago.

Missing from the top ten this year is British Steel Corp.

Sony Tops Earnings List

TOKYO, July 31 (AP-DJ).—Japan's Tax Administration Agency said today that Sony Corp. declared an income of 12.77 billion yen (about $44.7 million) for the six months ended April 30, up 7.1 billion yen from a year earlier.

The agency said Sony ranked as the biggest earner among firms reporting their incomes for the third consecutive semi-annual term.

Kawasaki Steel, in second place a year ago, dropped to seventh, with an income of 2.7 billion yen, down from 3.37 billion a year earlier.

Toyo Kogyo was in second place this year with earnings of 7.14 billion yen, up 1.6 billion.

Japan Reportedly Sets Goal On Cutting Its Trade Surplus

By Selig S. Harrison

President Nixon's special trade representative, William Eberle, while the two Japanese leaders avoided a "firm commitment," U.S. sources say, their willingness to agree on a common target for the specific balance-of-payments level marks "a new recognition of the seriousness of the problem."

[Mr. Nakasone said today that Japan is prepared to take emergency measures if necessary to reduce its trade surplus with the United States, Reuters reported. He did not elaborate, but observers believed he was referring to possible steps to curb exports by means of a surtax. The alternative, he warned, is inevitable pressure for another yen revaluation. He added that Japan will do everything in its power to avert such a situation.]

Washington officials estimate that the trade surplus in Japan's favor during the current calendar year will hit $3.8 billion while Japan sets the figure at $3.6 billion.

Mr. Eberle expressed "disappointment" Friday after a four-day trade conference ended without significant concrete concessions by Japan pointing toward an early reduction in the trade imbalance.

U.S. sources say that it is "still not clear" what Japan might do to hold the imbalance down to $3 billion. Japanese sources announced Saturday that $24 million in advance purchases of U.S. grain would be made by private dealers in addition to a $26-million commitment by a government grain purchasing agency disclosed Friday.

Reserves Rise

TOKYO, July 31 (Reuters).—Japan's external reserves rose $39 million this month to $15.88 billion, the Finance Ministry said today.

Fewer Renew Pledge

LONDON, July 31 (Reuters).—The CBI said today about half the number of large companies who signed the voluntary price restraint assurance last year had repeated the written pledge.

Last year 200 of Britain's largest companies agreed to limit their price increases.

U.S. Estimate Of Industry Profits Falls

First-Quarter Total Is Reduced 5.3 Percent

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

WASHINGTON, July 31 (N.Y.T.).—The government has revised the official figure for corporate profits in the first quarter of this year as well as for the year 1971.

The revision, significantly downward, continues a pattern of recent years. Profits are at first estimated by the Commerce Department on the basis of published company reports and then are revised downward when corporate tax returns become available.

Corporate profits after tax for the first quarter of this year were originally reported at an annual rate of $52.3 billion. Under the revision, published earlier this month, profits are now shown at a rate of $49.5 billion, a drop of 5.3 percent.

Statistics Unhappy

For nonfinancial corporations—the bulk of the total—the drop is from an original figure of $40.3 billion to a revised figure of $35.4 billion, a decline of 12.1 percent.

Commerce Department statisticians, while unhappy about the problem, say that the downward revisions this year were a little smaller than a year ago. But they see no solution to the underlying problem, which evidently puzzles them.

The revisions affect corporate profits both before and after tax. For calendar 1971, total profits before tax are now put at $85.3 billion, down from the earlier figure of $88.4 billion. After-tax profits are now $45.9 billion compared with $47 billion.

For the first quarter of this year before-tax profits were originally reported as running at an annual rate of $18.6 billion. Now the figure is $18.2 billion.

There were also moderate downward revisions in the figures for 1970.

One result of the revisions is that profits turn out to have been even smaller in relation to the gross national product, or the national income, than had been thought previously. Profits in 1970, even under the earlier figures, were lower in relation to the gross national product than in any year since the depression of the 1930s.

This relationship, however, does not take into account changes in the postwar period in depreciation regulations, particularly those since 1961. These have the effect of reducing reported profits without reducing corporate cash flow.

Even with an adjustment for higher depreciation, however, profits have had an unusually low share of national income in the past three years.

Building Orders In Britain Climb

LONDON, July 31 (AP-DJ).—Total new construction orders in Britain rose in May to $460 million, up from $441 million in April and $386 million a year earlier, the Department of the Environment reported today.

New orders for industrial plant construction totaled $149 million in May, up from $45 million in April and $24 million in May 1971.

Housing construction orders were worth $156 million, down from $197 million in April but up from $109 million a year earlier.

N.Y. Prices Wander in Light Trade

By Vartan G. Vartan

NEW YORK, July 31 (N.Y.T.).—Prices on the New York Stock Exchange declined today for the fifth session in a row as volume slipped to its slowest pace in four weeks.

However, prices showed some signs of life in the final half hour of trading as glamour stocks strengthened. Late gains included Burroughs, up 2 5/8 to 203 3/8; Levitz Furniture, up 1 5/8 to 46 1/2; and Control Data, up 1 1/4 to 70 1/2.

Dow Index Dips

The Dow Jones industrial average, down by more than 4 points at 12:30, recovered to finish at 824.74 with a loss of 1.86.

The turnover of 11.12 million shares, indicating both investor apathy and indecision, was the lowest since $34 million shares changed hands on July 3.

Curtiss-Wright, up 2 1/4 to 45 3/8, was the only stock on the active list to change by as much as a single point.

Issues with a sweet tooth or soft drink orientation did well. Peter Paul, the exchange's best percentage gainer, rose 2 5/8 to 29 7/8. It climbed 3 1/2 last week, despite lower earnings. Recently, reports of a possible proxy contest involving the candy-maker circulated in Wall Street.

Dr. Pepper, which proposed a 2-for-1 split and increased its dividend last week, moved up 2 1/4 to 50 5/8.

American Airlines, off 3/8 to 30 1/4, and Western Air Lines, down 3/8 to 36 3/8, had their first chance to react to the government's rejection of their proposed merger.

Molybdenum Corp., the volume leader, added 1/2 at 15 7/8 after rising 3 3/8 Friday as "rare earths" became a new buzz phrase among brokers. Molybdenum, a leading miner and processor of rare earth products, disclosed plans today to form a new company with the Aluminum Co. of America to supply rare earth metals.

Researchers at Bell Telephone Laboratories reported Friday that they had found certain combinations of rare earth elements to be as effective as platinum catalysts in removing carbon monoxide from automobile exhausts. That news resulted in a 3 1/2-point drop on Friday in Engelhard Minerals, whose recent market strength had centered on the use of platinum-based catalytic converters to control auto exhausts.

Engelhard rebounded 1 3/8 to 28 1/2 today, following its statement that Bell's results were based solely on laboratory ex-

Profits at Texaco Down 9% In Quarter, 5.7% in 1st Half

NEW YORK, July 31 (N.Y.T.).—Despite the highest consolidated gross income for any quarter and any half in Texaco's history, earnings declined in the three and six months ended June 30 from last year's periods.

The reduced earnings were attributed primarily to lower product prices and to increased payments to producing countries.

Second-quarter net was down 9 percent despite an 18.4 percent rise in gross income. Earnings for the half year were off 5.7 percent while consolidated gross income rose 20.1 percent.

On July 14, the International Herald Tribune erroneously published an earnings report attributed to Texaco which, in fact, were those of PepsiCo. The Texaco earnings were reported on Friday.

Profits in the second quarter slipped to $185.16 million, or 69 cents a share, from $202.58 million, or 75 cents a share, in the year-ago period. Consolidated gross income rose to $2.31 billion.

For the first half, net income fell to $418.08 million, or $1.53 a share, from last year's $440.56 million, or $1.62 a share. Consolidated gross income rose to $4.6 billion from $3.84 billion in the 1971 half.

Texaco's production of crude oil and natural gas liquids for the first six months of the year rose 10.6 percent, and refinery runs increased 5.4 percent. Petroleum product sales rose 13.4 percent from year-earlier levels.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Annual General Meeting of the Members of the Company will be held at the Halycon Balmoral Hotel, Nassau, N.P., Bahamas, on Wednesday, August 16th, 1972 at 11.00 a.m. (Nassau time), for the following purposes:

- To consider and, if thought fit, to pass the following Resolution as an Ordinary Resolution of the Company:
 - That the Company ratifies and approves and confirms an agreement dated June 1st, 1972, made between the Company and Resources Properties Limited (RPL) upon terms which provide for the purchase by the Company of the entire issued share capital of Resources Properties Limited (RPL) for the sum of $50,000,000 of its unissued Common Shares of U.S. cent one each at a premium of U.S. $1.57 per share, the said agreement being subject to the approval of the shareholders of the Company by way of a special resolution, which was duly passed at a Special General Meeting of the Company held on July 14th, 1972, and the delivery to the Company of certain records and shareholder information and the provision at no expense of related services during a transitional period.
 - Further information relating to the above Resolution is contained in the Directors' Report which may be obtained as set forth in Note 1 hereunder.
 - To receive the Report of the Directors and the Financial Statements and the Auditors' Report for the period from the date of incorporation to December 31st, 1971.
 - To elect Mr. Walter H. Saunders, who retires by rotation as a Director.
 - To elect Mr. Frank G. Beatty, who retires under the provisions of Article 64, as a Director.
 - To authorize the Directors to fix the remuneration of the Auditors.
 - To transact any other ordinary business of the Company.
- FRANK G. BEATTY, Secretary.
- DATED JULY 21ST, 1972.

- NOTES

Evert's Victory Aided by Changes

July 31 (AP)—The Australian victory was clinched earlier in the day by team captain Margaret Court, in her first tournament since having a baby, when she beat Valerie Ziegenfuss, 6-1, 6-2.

Later, Mrs. Court teamed with Kerry Melville to score a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Mrs. Ziegenfuss and Wendy Overton.

Chris, the headliner of the Wimbledon family, played even on grass, said Miss Goolagong. "I was as happy as a lark to deal with the continuous-play rule of Wimbledon," she said.

"The first two sets were this same old Wimbledon," she said. "I was as happy as a lark to deal with the continuous-play rule of Wimbledon," she said.

At Wimbledon, there was no break between sets but rules in the Rome Cup have called for a 15-minute break.

Ferrari Pulls Out Of Racing Economics Listed By Italian Firm

MODENA, Italy, July 31 (Reuters)—Ferrari announced today it was pulling out of international motor racing next year for economic reasons.

A communiqué from the famous Italian racing firm said: "Given the uncertainty of the coming and future times, which do not allow for a too (financial) expensive program, Ferrari is leaving the drivers free at the end of the 1972 season."

The communiqué added: "The Italian firm will keep its technical staff intact and will continue to plan and construct an example of a formula one car and of a sports prototype which it will also try out in races but it will not take on the commitments for world championships."

Ferrari's drivers include Jackie Ickx of Belgium and Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland, who finished one two in yesterday's West German Grand Prix.

Ickx said in an interview with Belgian radio that he would continue to drive for Ferrari until the end of the year and that he hoped to rejoin the firm whenever it returned to competition.

Ickx said he had had several offers for next season but declined to say from which team. "It's too soon to say," he added.

Since 1950, Ferrari's formula one cars have been the most successful in motor racing, having won 48 world championship events.

The firm was founded during the 1930s by Enzo Ferrari, who began his career as a garage mechanic and went on to earn Italy's highest award for industry as a motor manufacturer.

Ferrari set up on his own when Alfa Romeo, for whom he was racing manager, withdrew from competition during the 1930s through his first success did not come until 1951 in the British Grand Prix.

But from then on, Ferrari became a powerful force in motor racing.

Ferrari's triumph in this year's World Manufacturers' Championship was its third victory since the series was introduced in 1958. It previously won the title in 1961 and 1964.

Astros, Padres Divide Pair in Extra Innings

From Wire Dispatches
WASHINGTON, July 31.—Jimmy Stewart singled home the tie-breaking run with the bases loaded in the 10th to give the Astros a 4-3 victory in Houston.

The Padres took the opener, 10-7, in 14 innings with rookie Dave Roberts driving in five runs and Derrell Thomas delivering a tie-breaking single.

In the second game, Cesar Cedeno drew a leadoff walk in the bottom of the 10th from reliever Gary Ross and stole second.

Catcher Curt Blefary bobbled Jim Wynn's hunt as Cedeno took third. Lee May was purposely passed, loading the bases.

Stewart, who had entered the game in the eighth as a pinch-runner, then greeted reliever Mark Schaeffer with his single.

San Diego took a 3-1 lead after six innings on two home runs by Nate Colbert, Nos. 24 and 25, giving him the National League lead with Dick Allen of the Chicago White Sox.

Glen Beckert drilled a two-run double with two out in the eighth inning to give Chicago a 5-4 victory in the second game after the Cubs beat St. Louis, 4-0, behind Rick Reuschel's six-inning shutout at Wrigley Field.

The Cubs scored three unearned runs in the third inning of the first game on two errors by third baseman Joe Torre.

The eighth-inning rally in the second game capped a Cub comeback following a four-run first inning for St. Louis.

Braves 14.5, Dodgers 4.4
Atlanta scored 14 runs without benefit of a home run in the first game, to win, 14-4, then repeated over Los Angeles, 5-4, in the second when Ralph Garr cleared the Atlanta Stadium fence with two on in the seventh inning.

Ernie Williams and Mike Lumme drove in three runs apiece and Felix Millan and Hank Aaron (two each) in the first game, when the Braves scored 12 runs off Bill Singer—eight unearned—in the first four innings.

The Dodgers committed seven errors in the doubleheader.

Reds 4.1, Giants 0.6
Tito Fuentes drove in the tie-breaking run with an infield single and pinch-hitter Ed Gooden followed with a bases-loaded triple as San Francisco scored five times in the 10th inning to win, 6-1, and divide a doubleheader in which Cincinnati's Ross Grimsley shut them out on eight hits in the opener, 4-0.

Trail Tigers by 1 Powell, Robinson Wake Up Orioles

BALTIMORE, July 31 (UPI)—The quiet bats of Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson are finally making some noise.

Powell, who was hitting .218 before the game, and Robinson, who was at .259, led Baltimore to within a game of first-place Detroit in the American League East yesterday with a 5-0 victory over the New York Yankees.

Powell made the Yankees' home-from-the-minors Ron Klimkowski an instant loser with a two-run homer in the first inning. "I don't know what was wrong or what I'm doing right now," said Powell before the game, "but I feel good again."

Powell's 12th blast was a 400-foot slice into the left-field bullpen.

Robinson drove in the third and fourth Orioles runs with line singles in the sixth and eighth. Once again, the only Robinson that matters in Baltimore, Brooks, has hit 333 in the last dozen games.

Mike Cuellar, now with a 10-8 won-lost mark, pitched his third shutout, a three-hitter, keeping the weak-hitting Yankees under his slow-ball spell. His white-wash lowered the earned run average of the Orioles' four starters to 2.42.

Red Sox 4, 2, Tigers 3, 7
Gates Brown slugged a tie-breaking home run in the fifth inning, then added a sacrifice fly in a four-run sixth that carried Detroit to a 7-2 victory that preserved the Tigers' hold on first place in the East. Boston won the doubleheader opener, 4-3, in Detroit on John Kennedy's tie-breaking sixth-inning single.

Rangers 2, 4, A's 1, 2
Dave Nelson drove in three runs and scored twice to give Texas a 2-1, 4-2 doubleheader sweep in Oakland. Nelson, who figured in every Ranger run scored in the twinbill, snapped a 2-2 tie in the Ranger seventh inning of the second game with a single after Jim Mason had singled and was sacrificed to second. He snapped a ninth-inning tie with a double to lead the Rangers to victory in the opener.

Indians 3, 6, Brewers 2, 1
Cleveland's Tom Henderson, 30, scattered six hits in his first major league start to beat Milwaukee 6-1, and complete a sweep at home as the Indians pulled out the first game, 3-2, in the ninth on Tom McCraw's two-run homer and Brewer shortstop Rich Auerbach's two-out error.

Angels 4, Royals 3
Bob Oliver lead off the bottom of the 11th inning with his 15th home run to power the Angels past Kansas City, 4-3, in California.

MONDAY
Allen's 2 Homers Inside the Park Pace White Sox
BLOOMINGTON, Minn., July 31 (UPI)—Dick Allen's two inside-the-park home runs produced five runs today and helped San Bahnsen to his 13th victory as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Minnesota Twins, 8-1.

Allen's hits were his 12th and 13th home runs in July and boosted his major league-leading total to 27.

His first inside-the-park home run came off Pat Kelly and Luis Alvarado to give the White Sox a 3-0 first-inning lead. Allen circled the bases after his line drive bounced over the head of Minnesota center fielder Bobby Darwin, who slipped trying to field the ball.

Allen's second blast also bounced away from Darwin, who was trying to make a shoestring catch.

Cubs 4, Cards 0
Billy Williams cracked four straight hits to tie for the National League batting lead and Ferguson Jenkins scattered six hits and drove in two runs with a single to lead the Cubs to a 4-0 victory in Chicago over St. Louis and a sweep of their four-game series.

Jenkins, posting his 14th victory against nine losses, hurled his 19th complete game of the season.

Williams raised his average to .346, tying him with Cesar Cedeno of Houston for the league lead.

Jacklin Out of PGA
BIRMINGHAM, Mich., July 31 (UPI)—Tony Jacklin of England has withdrawn from the Professional Golfers' Association championship, which will begin on Thursday at Oakland Hills Country Club. A PGA spokesman said that Jacklin notified tournament officials of his decision in a telegram, but gave no reason for withdrawing.
